Henley in Bloom

Bee-happy, Bee-healthy, Bee-utiful

In 2017, Henley in Bloom are celebrating bees! In the past few years bees have experienced substantial declines. There were 27 species of bees in the UK and three of those species are now extinct with many others under threat.

Why are bees in danger?

It is believed that a number of factors have contributed. The four most significant are:

- Environmental changes such as the extensive use of pesticides.
- The loss of the flower-rich habitat on which bees depend for food.
- Disease.
- Climate change.

What can Henley in Bloom do?

We are encouraging everyone in the town – from the people who buy our baskets to our garden competition entries to grow pollinator-friendly plants as organically as possible. By using our celebration beds at Mill Meadows to raise awareness and by supporting the Badgemore School Bee Keeping Project as well as providing people with pollinator friendly plant seeds we can make a change in our corner of the world.

We also fully support the local Brakspear Honey Bee Beer campaign in partnership with Friends of the Earth.

If you have any ideas on how we can celebrate bees or would like to be involved, please email bloom@henleytowncouncil.gov.uk for information.
